“ he loved to laugh about stupid stuff with us like mocking John smith (historical figure) and make stories where he would solo 1v1 the entire marvel universe it was probably the funniest thing i heard. plus hed make our friend group laugh with references to omni man (from the show invincible) and just random phrases. plus when we saw him we´d all start joking with him about random crap.

“ He was one of my best friends since freshman year and it truly hurt when I found out about what had happened to him. We always used to joke about the most silliest but dumbest things and talk about video games, Marvel, DC, really anything under the sun. He was such a great friend and he was one of the reasons I was even able to get through freshman and sophomore year. I'm so glad to have met him and had him in my life. He was so smart, kind, sweet, and I never even saw him get mad once, he always treated the teachers and people with respect. I know he's being taken care of and having fun up there with God, and may God bless his family too. 🙏

“ I didn't really know Brandon, but i know he was a wonderful person. He never got mad or was disrespectful towards anyone. He was sweet, understanding, funny and most of all a really smart person. He was always smiling and laughing, even when others around him weren't. He had such a bright smile and a wonderful personality. He was such a bright light in so many peoples lives. His presence was just like a ball of light, but now that light has dimmed. The day we lost Brandon was the day that Bryant High School turned quiet, no one was in the halls and no one was walking around. Everyone was crying, no one talked in class, the day was just quiet. I hope hes happy up in heaven, I hope hes laughing and smiling. I hate that his family has to go through this traumatic experience. I found myself crying at the news, even though i was one of his best friends. Bryant didn't just lose a student but lost a wonderful and gentle soul. He had his whole life ahead of him and i know he would've made something of himself. Until we meet again Brandon, like Spongebob said "Once A Goofy Goober, Always A Goofy Goober."

“ Even though I only knew him for two years he was one of my best friends and one of the very few people I know who could light up a room and make everyone laugh at the same time. He befriended me last year when I had no one and he has influenced me in so many ways and I will forever miss him. He will always have a place in my heart. My family and church is praying.

“ I'm so sorry. I didnt know him personally but he was a friend of my son so I've heard of him numerous times. My heart aches imagining what you must be going through. It's been a long time since the death of someone I've never met has affected me so greatly. I find myself looking at his picture and the youth combined with the similarities of our boys repeatedly brings me to tears. I am so so sorry. May you all be surrounded in light and love as you come back from this.

“ Although I had the privilege of teaching Brandon for only a short time, his presence left an everlasting impact on me. He was quiet, yet carried a wonderful sense of humor and a beautiful smile. His eyes would light up whenever he talked about his favorite Marvel games, and those moments brought such joy to see. I am truly grateful to have known him. I am praying for his family and friends through this time of heartache and grief.

“ I had the honor of teaching Brandon last year as well as this year. He is a great/respectful young man. He is quiet but always has time to make a joke or put a smile on someone’s face around him. He is the type of student that always stayed on task and approached every assignment with a goal of learning and being successful. He commonly put little doodles on his papers to keep occupied while others finish their work. The drawings ranged from “Bob Esponja,” as he labeled Sponge Bob, Power Puff Girls, anime characters and more. The drawings would commonly come with thought bubbles around the characters giving the play by play. I always loved doing notebook checks for his class due to all the fun doodles that were coming my way. Brandon’s sweet/calming spirit will be missed.
