“ it's been almost eight months now. i can't tell if i'm constantly distracting myself or if things are actually getting easier. i'm still seizure free so i got my license back. but it doesn't really change the fact you're not here & won't be back. i just really miss you. life is so very strange.

love,

“ you should still be here. i miss you more every single day. i wish i would've given you more chances. every day i suffer with the guilt of living without you. it's been almost four months and it only gets worse. i have so much love to give to you but there's nowhere for it to go. i know everything happens for a reason. it's just hard. some days it's really hard to be grateful. i feel so lost without you, and that's strange because i've never known a life with you. i often forget that this was your first time living too.

i'm listening to one of your favorite albums right now, mellon collie and the infinite sadness by the smashing pumpkins. it's pretty good. i wish we could be listening to it together though.

i love you so very much, and i promise to make you proud every single day. each and every thing i do is for you, my dad, isaac, noah, ezra, and elijah.

love always,
your jo bear
