“ *My love and prayers to Becky and Jeffrey.
I remember my first day at MFRD, you came and welcomed me as an old friend. Some one you and not seen in a long time, instead of some one you didn't know. I'll never forget that. I remember the way you shared the funny, yet loving story of when you were a newly wed. You did not want to disturb your Becky. You stopped at the door, took off your shoes/boots, and in total darkness made your way to the bedroom. What you were unaware of, those beautiful hardwood floors had just be waxed that day, and in doing so the furniture was not in the same place it was when you went to work that day. I could just see you sliding around on that floor, slamming into furniture, and goodness only knows what words were uttered in that moment. Those long skinny legs and arms flaying around.
Thank you for your kindness -- always.
Yes, Roy, --- you will be missed.
