“ Bill I remember teaching how to drive, play ball, use a bat. You were a great baseball player. I helped teach you how to swim. You were on ice skates basically from the time you could walk. I taught you how to box and some defense you were really good at that. You were a good man rest in peace I am proud of you my son.

“ Bill, may you finally rest in peace. I remember all the times filled with laughter and joy. May you find that with all the predeceased family you are now with. Thinking about the written obituary for you, I didn't realize that this funeral home allowed a 10 year old child to write the obituary for a grown-up.

I think the obituary is lovely. Writing such things is extremely difficult for those who are mourning. You yourself must be grieving terribly to post an insult to the funeral home & to the author of this obituary in their own time of loss. I pray you find some peace.

I'm Thinking about the wonderful man that is now forever missing from lives. I'm thinking of his kindness when helping others, his quick wit and humor. I'm especially thinking of how much I will miss his smile. I'm thinking about how incredibly painful Bill's loss is for all of us. I'm thinking how appalled I am that someone would intentionally insult and inflict more pain on Bill's WIDOW through a forum that's meant to respect and honor Bill. In fact, such cruelty speaks more to the character of the one spewing ugliness than who it was directed towards. I'm thinking, if what you're going to leave here isn't kind, classy, and RESPECTFULLY HONORING Bill, keep it to yourself. I pray peace and understanding finds and comforts us all, quickly.

“ Bill, you were a wonderful, caring son. I remember you and your buddies playing baseball for hours and you were such a good first baseman. I also remember your gangly 16-year-old self riding your bicycle to your after school job at the gas station and being inducted into the National Honor Society in your junior year of high school. You are at peace now, rest well.
