affection, and benevolence. Wilma embraced anyone and everyone “Big time”, raising and caring for so many in her path regardless of age, lifestyle, life choices, or relation. You could always find a place to lay your head at Wilma’s.

Wilma (“Like the Flintstones”) lived a full and colorful life that matched her personality and wardrobe. A dancer in her early years, she always had an appreciation for the arts as well as a thirst for speed behind the wheel. She is remembered for her love of bowling and always being ready for a good time. Her grandchildren fondly recall her smell of black coffee and biscuits and her hard gummy kisses. We will all miss her “BIG TIME”.
